

Dear Kandinsky Class

Once again this week has rushed by, I can't believe how quickly the weeks are passing! This week I was in school on Monday and Wednesday looking after Key Worker children. The weather was lovely on Wednesday so we spent a lot of time outside. In school the Key Worker children have been completing work set by their teachers, the same as you have been doing at home.

Jay's teacher asked him to read a book called, 'The Ugly Bug' this week by Liz Pichon. Within the story the bug is so ugly he is bullied by the other bugs however in the end when a bird tries to eat him, he is saved by his awful looks. Jay then had to write a little bit about the story and he painted a picture of the ugly bug. I have added a photograph of his painting below and a picture of the book cover. In Maths Jay has been completing doubles to 10 and as usual he has enjoyed the Maths work. Jay also asked me to teach him the time and he is working on o'clock and half past times.

On Friday, we met my Mam and Jay's Grandma for a walk in Wallsend. Jay was so excited to see his Grandma because as you know, they have a fantastic relationship and it has been awful for him not to be able to see her. He kept to the social distancing rules of course! We walked along a different cycle track in Wallsend called, 'The Waggonways' which goes all the way to the coast, although we didn't get that far walking! Years ago I cycled along the track and it comes out at Whitley Bay Lighthouse. I expect some of you have visited this lighthouse before on a day out with your families? We are extremely lucky to have some wonderful walks near us although it was very windy.

Jay also still loves to go out on his bike and we have been cycling nearly every day. He is so proud of himself riding with no stabilisers and it's fantastic exercise for both of us. On a daily basis we look forward to our bike rides.

I have been checking Spag.com, My Maths and TT Rock stars and well done to all of you who are completing all the necessary work. Please keep trying with the online work, although this week we have posted fun outdoor activities as this would have been half term! Please try to relax and spend some time with your families during half term. Jay will be completing less work this week although he knows he must read every night. I hope you are all continuing to read as it really is more important than anything else you could do with regard to school work.

I miss you all and hope to see you soon!

Mrs Fish
